Time for #OTalk . I'm here 🙋

RCOTSSWork @RCOT_Work

Welcome to our #OTalk and thank you for joining us. We'll kick off immediately with Q1: How can we facilitate a return to work for a client with a poor insight? We are interested to hear how you do this in a way that is honest but preserves their wellbeing and dignity.

Emma Harman @OTEmmaHarman

I'm ready! #OTalk !

Angela Chaulk @Angela_chaulk

RT @RCOT_Work: Looking forward to 8pm for tonight's #OTalk when we will be asking the #ot community to join our debate on the communication...

Bill Wong, OTD, OTR/L @BillWongOT

@RCOT_Work A1. That's an interesting question. I think first of all, you want to get as much info about the patient's past employment history as possible, as well as performing chart review first. After that, I think motivational interviewing will be key. #otalk

Healthywork Ltd @HealthyworkLtd

@RCOT_Work #otalk i discuss issues with a client and then a client reads their report before release to the referrer/employer so they can understand what our suggestions are.

Marissa_OT @Marissa_OT

@RCOT_Work I would say having a discussion with the client prior to meeting the employer is needed. This way you could run through client what you had in mind to say to the employer and also make sure everything the client wanted to get across is included #OTalk

Bill Wong, OTD, OTR/L @BillWongOT

@mehelenbarnes yes- absolutely. I think it is a good idea to have conversations with the patients in the beginning, but also during the remind the patient sometimes. #otalk

Laura Student OT @Laura_Does

@RCOT_Work #OTalk Ensuring the client is involved in all meetings about them and their work would be more client-centered, surely? misinterpretations are likely to occur as well and clients have control about what is said/not said.

Marissa_OT @Marissa_OT

@RCOT_Work Also, I think it is important to make the client aware that even the difficult topics need to be discussed but also linking it may affect them at work if the employer is not aware of the their difficulties in certain areas. #OTalk

Sheena Wight @sheena_OT

RT @RCOT_Work: #OTalk Question 3: How do you manage risk when things don't go to plan?

Bill Wong, OTD, OTR/L @BillWongOT

@RCOT_Work From a patient's perspective, I think you have to understand what the patients' tolerance first. #otalk

Sheena Wight @sheena_OT

@RCOT_Work #OTalk Risks should be fully anticipated and explored at the outside with the patient plus also have discussion / agree how to mitigate these ie best and worse case scenarios with alternatives explored.

RT @sheena_OT: @RCOT_Work #OTalk Risks should be fully anticipated and explored at the outside with the patient plus also have dis

Marissa_OT @Marissa_OT

@RCOT_Work It's all about positive risk taking. If something doesn't work out, then we need to take a step back, have a look at what w where it went wrong and approach the situation differently next time. I think it is also important to have a debrief after as well #OTalk

Laura Student OT @Laura_Does

@RCOT_Work #OTalk Risk assessing key tasks and having a grading plan in place in the first place. This could also allow clients to step they feel comfortable to instead of when expected. Fewer problems occur this way I believe? Not sure about afterwards.

Juliette Truman @Jt12Truman

I agree we need to discuss this with our client and the employer prior to any action nothing gained without positive risk taking #OTalk

@RCOT_Work Sometimes the pt has not been given enough info/Referral options, so it is necessary to support them and make recommendations. Dont be devisive. #otalk

Bill Wong, OTD, OTR/L @BillWongOT

@RLucasOT1 @Marissa_OT @RCOT_Work I see that personally. For me to work in my current work setting in OT actually was an exam Before I interviewed, I actually had low self confidence because my first OT job flopped badly. So, to go to another setting with no plac experience was scary. #otalk
